

IN THE MATTER OF

TIME WARNER INC., ET AL.

CONSENT ORDER, ETC., IN REGARD TO ALLEGED VIOLATION OF SEC. 7 OF THE CLAYTON ACT AND SEC. 5 OF THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT*Docket C-3709. Complaint, Feb. 3, 1997--Decision, Feb. 3, 1997*

This consent order requires the restructuring of the acquisition by Time Warner of Turner Broadcasting Systems, Inc. by, among other things, requiring Tele-Communications, Inc. ("TCI") to divest its interest in Time Warner to a separate company, requiring TCI, Turner and Time Warner to cancel long-term carriage agreements, barring Time Warner's programming interests from discriminating in carriage decisions against rival programmers, and requiring Time Warner's cable interests to carry a rival to CNN.

Appearances

COMPLAINT

Pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act and the Clayton Act, and by virtue of the authority vested in it by said Acts, the Federal Trade Commission ("Commission"), having reason to believe that respondents Time Warner Inc., Turner Broadcasting System, Inc., Tele-Communications, Inc., and Liberty Media Corporation, all subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission, have entered into various agreements in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45, and that if the terms of such agreements were to be consummated, would result in a violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 18, and Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45, and it appearing to the Commission that a proceeding in respect thereof would be in the public interest, hereby issues its complaint, stating its charges as follows:

I. DEFINITIONS

1. For the purposes of this complaint, the following definitions shall apply:

a. "Cable Television Programming Service" means satellite-delivered video programming that is offered, alone or with other services, to Multichannel Video Programming Distributors ("MVPDs") in the United States.

b. "Fully Diluted Equity of Time Warner" means all Time Warner common stock actually issued and outstanding plus the aggregate number of shares of Time Warner common stock that would be issued and outstanding assuming the exercise of all outstanding options, warrants and rights (excluding shares that would be issued in the event a poison pill is triggered) and the conversion of all outstanding securities that are convertible into Time Warner common stock.

c. "Multichannel Video Programming Distributor" or "MVPD" means a person providing multiple channels of video programming to subscribers in the United States for which a fee is charged, by any of various methods including, but not limited to, cable, satellite master antenna television, multichannel multipoint distribution, direct-to-home satellite (C-band, Ku-band, direct broadcast satellite), ultra high-frequency microwave systems (sometimes called LMDS), open video systems, or the facilities of common carrier telephone companies or their affiliates, as well as buying groups or purchasing agents of all such persons.

d. "Turner Cable Television Programming Service" means each Cable Television Programming Service, whether or not satellite-delivered, that is currently owned, controlled by, or affiliated with Turner.

II. RESPONDENT TIME WARNER INC.

2. Respondent Time Warner Inc. ("Time Warner") is a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its headquarters office and principal place of business located at 75 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, New York. Time Warner had sales of approximately $8 billion in 1995.

3. Respondent Time Warner is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs throughout the United States. Time Warner's primary Cable Television Programming Services include Home Box Office ("HBO") and Cinemax, and their multiplexed versions. Other Cable Television Programming Services that are controlled by or affiliated with Time Warner include E! Entertainment Television, Comedy Central, and Court TV. Time Warner also owns approximately 20 percent of the outstanding stock of Turner. Time Warner is the nation's largest producer of Cable Television Programming Services sold to MVPDs, measured on the basis of subscription revenues. Time Warner's subscription revenues from the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs in 1995 were approximately $1.5 billion, and its total revenues from Cable Television Programming Services in 1995 were approximately $1.6 billion.

4. Respondent Time Warner's HBO, the largest Cable Television Programming Service measured on the basis of subscription revenues, is viewed by MVPDs as a "marquee" or "crown jewel" service, i.e., those services necessary to attract and retain a significant percentage of their subscribers.

5. Respondent Time Warner is, and at all times relevant herein has been, an MVPD. Time Warner currently serves, either directly or indirectly, approximately 11.5 million households in selected areas in the United States. These 11.5 million households are approximately 17 percent of all of the households in the United States that purchase Cable Television Programming Services from MVPDs. Time Warner is the nation's second largest MVPD. Time Warner's total revenues in 1995 from serving as an MVPD were approximately $3.25 billion.

6. Respondent Time Warner is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 1 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 12, and is a corporation whose business is in or affecting commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C.4.

III. RESPONDENT TURNER BROADCASTING SYSTEM, INC.

7. Respondent Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. ("Turner") is a corporation existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Georgia with its headquarters and principal place of business located at One CNN Center, Atlanta, Georgia. Turner had sales of approximately $3.4 billion in 1995.

8. Respondent Turner is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs throughout the United States. Turner's Cable Television Programming Services include Cable News Network ("CNN"), Headline News ("HLN"), Turner Network Television ("TNT"), TBS Superstation ("WTBS"), Cartoon Network, Turner Classic Movies ("TCM"), CNN International USA ("CNNI USA"), CNN Financial Network ("CNNfn"), and services emphasizing regional sports programming. Turner is one of the nation's largest producers of Cable Television Programming Services sold to MVPDs as measured by subscription revenue. Turner's subscription revenues from the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs in 1995 were approximately $700 million, and its total revenues from Cable Television Programming Services in 1995 were approximately $2 billion. As a programmer that does not own its own distribution systems, Turner had no incentive to, and generally did not, charge significantly higher prices for the same Cable Television Programming Services to new MVPD entrants compared to the prices offered to established MVPDs.

9. Respondent Turner's CNN, TNT, and WTBS are viewed by MVPDs as "marquee" or "crown jewel" services, i.e., those services necessary to attract and retain a significant percentage of their subscribers.

10. Respondent Turner is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 1 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 12, and is a corporation whose business is in or affecting commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 44.

IV. RESPONDENT TELE-COMMUNICATIONS, INC.

11. Respondent Tele-Communications, Inc. ("TCI") is a corporation existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its headquarters and principal place of business located at 5619 DTC Parkway, Englewood, Colorado. TCI had sales of approximately $6.85 billion in 1995.

12. Respondent TCI is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs throughout the United States. Some of the larger Cable Television Programming Services that are controlled by or affiliated with TCI include Starz!, Encore, Discovery Channel, The Learning Channel, Court TV, E! Entertainment Television, BET, The Family Channel, Home Shopping Network, and services emphasizing regional sports programming. TCI also owns, directly or indirectly, approximately 24 percent of the outstanding stock of Turner. TCI's subscription revenues from the sale of Cable Television Programming Services controlled by TCI to MVPDs in 1995 were approximately $300 million. TCI's total revenues, excluding home shopping retail sales, from Cable Television Programming Services that are controlled by or affiliated with TCI in 1995 were approximately $520 million.

13. Respondent TCI is, and at all times relevant herein has been, an MVPD. TCI currently serves approximately 14 million households in selected areas in the United States. TCI also has either direct or indirect interests in cable television systems that distribute Cable Television Programming Services to an additional approximately 4 million households in the United States. These 18 million households are approximately 27 percent of all of the households in the United States that subscribe to Cable Television Programming Services from MVPDs. TCI is the nation's largest MVPD. TCI's total revenues in 1995 from serving as an MVPD were approximately $5 billion.

14. Respondent TCI is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 1 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 12, and is a corporation whose business is in or affecting commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 44.

V. RESPONDENT LIBERTY MEDIA CORPORATION

15. Respondent Liberty Media Corporation ("LMC") is a corporation existing and doing business under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Delaware, with its headquarters and principal place of business located at 8101 East Prentice Avenue, Englewood, Colorado. LMC is a wholly-owned subsidiary of respondent TCI.

16. Respondent LMC is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs throughout the United States.

17. Respondent LMC is, and at all times relevant herein has been, engaged in commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 1 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 12, and is a corporation whose business is in or affecting commerce as "commerce" is defined in Section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 44.

VI. THE AGREEMENTS

18. This matter comprises three related principal agreements: (a) the acquisition by Time Warner of Turner; (b) the acquisition by TCI and LMC of an interest in Time Warner; and (c) the long-term mandatory carriage agreements between TCI, Turner, and Time Warner requiring TCI to carry Turner's CNN, Headline News, TNT, and WTBS at a discounted price based on the industry average price.

A. The Time Warner-Turner Acquisition

19. On or about September 22, 1995, respondent Time Warner and respondent Turner entered into an agreement for Time Warner to acquire the approximately 80 percent of the outstanding shares in Turner that it does not already own.

20. The value of the Time Warner-Turner acquisition as of the date the Time Warner-Turner agreement was entered into was approximately $7.5 billion. As initially structured, the transaction called for each share of Turner Class A Common Stock and Turner Class B Common Stock to be converted into the right to receive .75 of a share of New Time Warner Common Stock. In addition, each share of Turner Class C Convertible Preferred Stock was to be converted into the right to receive 4.8 shares of New Time Warner Common Stock.

B. The TCI-Time Warner Acquisition

21. Respondents TCI and LMC have, directly or indirectly, an approximately 24 percent existing interest in respondent Turner. By trading their interest in Turner for an interest in Time Warner, TCI and LMC would have acquired approximately a 7.5 percent interest in the Fully Diluted Equity of Time Warner, or approximately 10 percent of the outstanding shares of Time Warner, valued at approximately $2 billion as of the date the respondents signed the proposed consent agreement.

22. Respondent TCI also would acquire a right of first refusal on the approximately 7.4 percent interest in the Fully Diluted Equity of Time Warner that R. E. Turner, III, chairman of Turner, would receive as result of trading his interest in Turner for an interest in respondent Time Warner. Although Time Warner has a "poison pill" that would prevent TCI from acquiring more than a certain amount of stock without triggering adverse consequences, that poison pill would still allow TCI to acquire approximately 15 percent of the Fully Diluted Equity of Time Warner, and if the poison pill were to be altered or waived, TCI could acquire more than 15 percent of the Fully Diluted Equity of Time Warner.

C. The Long-Term Mandatory Carriage Agreements

23. On or about September 14, 1995, and September 15, 1995, in anticipation of and contingent upon the Time Warner-Turner and TCI-Time Warner acquisitions, TCI, Turner, and Time Warner entered into two long-term mandatory carriage agreements formally referred to as the Programming Services Agreements ("PSAs"). Under the terms of these PSAs, TCI would be required, on virtually all of its cable television systems, to carry CNN, Headline News, TNT, and WTBS for a 20-year period. The price to TCI would be 85 percent of the average price paid by the rest of the industry for these services.

VII. TRADE AND COMMERCE

24. One relevant line of commerce (i.e., the product market) in which to analyze the effects of the proposed transaction is the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs.

25. Another relevant line of commerce in which to analyze the effects of the proposed transaction is the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to households.

26. Cable Television Programming Services are a relevant line of commerce because over-the-air broadcast television, video cassette rentals, and other forms of news and entertainment do not have a sufficient price-constraining effect on the sales of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs, or the resale of Cable Television Programming Services by MVPDs to households so as to prevent the exercise of market power.

27. The relevant section of the country (i.e., the geographic market) in which to analyze the effects of the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs is the entire United States.

28. The entire United States is the relevant section of the country in which to analyze the effects of the proposed transactions in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs because most Cable Television Programming Services are distributed throughout the United States.

29. The relevant sections of the country in which to analyze the effects of the sale of Cable Television Programming Services by MVPDs to households are each of the local areas in which either respondent Time Warner or Respondent TCI operate as MVPDs.

VIII. MARKET STRUCTURE

30. The sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs in the United States is highly concentrated, whether measured by the Herfindahl-Hirschmann Index (commonly referred to as "HHI") or by two-firm and four-firm concentration ratios.

31. The post-acquisition HHI for the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs in the United States measured on the basis of subscription revenues would increase by approximately 663 points, from 1,549 to 2,212, and will increase further if Time Warner converts WTBS from a "superstation" to a cable network charging subscriber fees. Post-acquisition Time Warner will be the largest provider of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs in the United States and its market share will be in excess of 40 percent.

32. The post-acquisition HHI in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services by MVPDs to households in each of the local areas in which respondent Time Warner and respondent TCI sell Cable Television Programming Services is unchanged from the proposed acquisitions and remains highly-concentrated. Time Warner, as an MVPD, serves, either directly or indirectly, approximately 11.5 million households in selected areas in the United States that represent approximately 17 percent of all of the households in the United States that purchase Cable Television Programming Services. TCI, as an MVPD, serves, either directly or indirectly, approximately 18 million households that represent 27 percent of all of the households in the United States that subscribe to Cable Television Programming Services.

IX. ENTRY CONDITIONS

33. Entry into the relevant markets is difficult, and would not be timely, likely or sufficient to prevent anticompetitive effects.

34. Entry into the production of Cable Television Programming Services for sale to MVPDs that would have a significant market impact and prevent the anticompetitive effects is difficult. It generally takes more than two years to develop a Cable Television Programming Service to a point where it has a substantial subscriber base and competes directly with the Time Warner and Turner "marquee" or "crown jewel" services throughout the United States. Timely entry is made even more difficult and time consuming due to a shortage of available channel capacity.

35. Entry into the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to households in each of the local areas in which respondent Time Warner and respondent TCI operate as MVPDs is dependent upon access to a substantial majority of the high quality, "marquee" or "crown jewel" programming that MVPD subscribers deem important to their decision to subscribe, and that such access is threatened by increasing concentration at the programming level, combined with vertical integration of such programming into the MVPD level.

X. COMPETITION AFFECTED

36. Respondent Time Warner and respondent Turner are actual competitors with each other and with other sellers in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs, and Time Warner's HBO, and Turner's CNN, TNT, and WTBS, are a large percentage of the limited number of "marquee" or "crown jewel" Cable Television Programming Services which disproportionately attract subscribers to MVPDs.

37. Respondent Time Warner faces actual and potential competition from other MVPDs and potential MVPD entrants in the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to households in each of the local areas in which it serves as an MVPD.

38. The effects of the agreements, if consummated, may be substantially to lessen competition in the relevant lines of commerce in the relevant sections of the country in violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 18, and Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45, in the following ways, among others:

a. Enabling respondent Time Warner to increase prices on its Cable Television Programming Services sold to MVPDs, directly or indirectly (e.g., by requiring the purchase of unwanted programming), through its increased negotiating leverage with MVPDs, including through conditioning purchase of one or more "marquee" or "crown jewel" channels on purchase of other channels;

b. Enabling respondent Time Warner to increase prices on its Cable Television Programming Services sold to MVPDs by raising barriers to entry by new competitors or to repositioning by existing competitors, by preventing such rivals from achieving sufficient distribution to realize economies of scale; these effects are likely, because

(1) Respondent Time Warner has direct financial incentives as the post-acquisition owner of the Turner Cable Television Programming Services not to carry other Cable Television Programming Services that directly compete with the Turner Cable Television Programming Services; and

(2) Respondent TCI has diminished incentives and diminished ability to either carry or invest in Cable Television Programming Services that directly compete with the Turner Cable Television Programming Services because the PSA agreements require TCI to carry Turner's CNN, Headline News, TNT, and WTBS for 20 years, and because TCI, as a significant shareholder of Time Warner, will have significant financial incentives to protect all of Time Warner's Cable Television Programming Services; and

c. Denying rival MVPDs and any potential rival MVPDs of respondent Time Warner competitive prices for Cable Television Programming Services, or charging rivals discriminatorily high prices for Cable Television Programming Services.

XI. VIOLATIONS CHARGED

39. The agreement entered into between Time Warner and Turner for Time Warner to acquire Turner violates Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45, and would, if consummated, violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 18, and Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45.

40. The agreement entered into between TCI, LMC, and Time Warner for TCI and LMC to acquire an equity interest in Time Warner violates Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45, and would, if consummated, violate Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 18, and Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45.

41. The PSAs entered into between TCI, Turner, and Time Warner violate Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45, and would, if consummated, violate Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45.

Commissioner Azcuenaga and Commissioner Starek dissenting.

DECISION AND ORDER

The Federal Trade Commission ("Commission"), having initiated an investigation of the proposed acquisition of Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. ("Turner") by Time Warner Inc. ("Time Warner"), and Tele-Communications, Inc.'s ("TCI") and Liberty Media Corporation's ("LMC") proposed acquisitions of interests in Time Warner, and it now appearing that Time Warner, Turner, TCI, and LMC (collectively, "respondents") having been furnished with a copy of a draft complaint that the Bureau of Competition proposed to present to the Commission for its consideration, and which, if issued by the Commission, would charge respondents with violations of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 45, and Section 7 of the Clayton Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 18; and

Respondents, their attorneys, and counsel for the Commission having thereafter executed an agreement containing a consent order, an admission by respondents of all the jurisdictional facts set forth in the aforesaid draft of complaint, a statement that the signing of said agreement is for settlement purposes only and does not constitute an admission by respondents that the law has been violated as alleged in such complaint, and waivers and other provisions as required by the Commission's Rules; and

The Commission having thereafter considered the matter and having determined that it had reason to believe that the respondents have violated the said Acts, and that complaint should issue stating its charges in that respect, and having thereupon accepted the executed consent agreement and placed such agreement on the public record for a period of sixty (60) days, and having duly considered the comments filed thereafter by interested persons pursuant to Section 2.34 of its Rules, now in further conformity with the procedure prescribed in Section 2.34 of its Rules, the Commission hereby issues its complaint, makes the following jurisdictional findings and enters the following order:

Provided, however, that the TCI Control Shareholders may communicate with an officer, director or employee of The Separate Company when the subject is one of the issues listed in subparagraph 6 on which TCI Control Shareholders are permitted to vote, except that, when a TCI Control Shareholder seeks to initiate action on a subject listed in subparagraph six on which the TCI Control Shareholders are permitted to vote, the initial proposal for such action shall be made in writing. (2) TCI, LMC and the TCI Control Shareholders shall not acquire or hold any Ownership Interest in Time Warner that is entitled to exercise voting power except (a) a vote of one-one hundredth (1/100) of a vote per share owned, voting with the outstanding common stock, with respect to the election of directors and (b) with respect to proposed changes in the charter of Time Warner Inc. or of the instrument creating such securities that would (i) adversely change any of the terms of such securities or (ii) adversely affect the rights, power, or preferences of such securities. Provided, further, that day-to-day market price changes that cause any such holding to exceed the latter threshold shall not be deemed to cause the parties to be in violation of this paragraph.

IV.

It is further ordered, That:

(A) For six months after the closing date, TCI and Time Warner shall not enter into any new Programming Service Agreement that requires carriage of any Turner Video Programming Service on any analog Tier of TCI's CATVs.

(B) Any Programming Service Agreement entered into thereafter that requires carriage of any Turner Video Programming Service on TCI's CATVs on an analog Tier shall be limited in effective duration to five (5) years, except that such agreements may give TCI the unilateral right(s) to renew such agreements for one or more five-year periods.

(C) Notwithstanding the foregoing, Time Warner, Turner and TCI may enter into, prior to the closing date, agreements that require carriage on an analog Tier by TCI for no more than five years for each of WTBS (with the five year period to commence at the time of WTBS' conversion to Converted WTBS) and Headline News, and such agreements may give TCI the unilateral right(s) to renew such agreements for one or more five-year periods.

For Turner Video Programming Services not in existence on July 30, 1996, the pre-closing date comparison will be to relative Carriage Terms offered with respect to any Turner Video Programming Service existing as of July 30, 1996.

(B) Time Warner shall be in violation of this paragraph if the Carriage Terms it offers to the Competing MVPD for those subscribers outside the Service Area Overlap are set at a higher level compared to Similarly Situated MVPDs so as to avoid the restrictions set forth in subparagraph (A).

Such replacement Service shall have, six months after the date the first Service ceased operation or the date of termination of the first Agreement because of the material breach, contractual commitments to supply its Service to at least 10 million subscribers on Unaffiliated MVPDs, or, together with the contractual commitments it will obtain from Time Warner, total contractual commitments to supply its Service to 15 million subscribers; if no such Service has such contractual commitments, then Time Warner may choose from among the two Services with contractual commitments with Unaffiliated MVPDs for the largest number of subscribers.

APPENDIX I

INTERIM AGREEMENT

This Interim Agreement is by and between Time Warner Inc. ("Time Warner"), a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the law of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business at New York, New York; Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. ("Turner"), a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the law of the State of Georgia with its office and principal place of business at Atlanta, Georgia; Tele-Communications, Inc. ("TCI"), a corporation organized, existing, and doing business under and by virtue of the law of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business located at Englewood, Colorado; Liberty Media Corp. ("LMC"), a corporation organized, existing and doing business under and by virtue of the law of the State of Delaware, with its office and principal place of business located at Englewood, Colorado, and the Federal Trade Commission ("Commission"), and independent agency of the United States Government, established under the Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914, 15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.

Whereas, Time Warner entered into an agreement with Turner for Time Warner to acquire the outstanding voting securities of Turner, and TCI and LMC proposed to acquire stock in Time Warner thereafter "the Acquisition");

Whereas, the Commission is investigating the Acquisition to determine whether it would violate any statute enforced by the Commission;

Whereas, TCI and LMC are willing to enter into an Agreement Containing Consent Order (hereafter "Consent Order") requiring them, inter alia, to divest TCI's and LMC's interest in Time Warner and TCI's and LMC's Turner-Related Businesses," by contributing those interests to a separate corporation, The Separate Company, the stock of which will be distributed to the holders of Liberty Tracking Stock ("the Distribution"), but, in order to fulfill paragraph II(D) of that Consent Order, TCI and LMC must apply now to receive an Internal Revenue Service ruling as to whether the Distribution will be generally tax-free to both the Liberty Tracking Stock holders and to TCI under Section 355 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended ("IRS Ruling");

Whereas, "TCI's and LMC's Interest in Time Warner" means all of the economic interest in Time Warner to be acquired by TCI and LMC, including the right of first refusal with respect to Time Warner stock to be held by R.E. Turner, III, pursuant to the Shareholders Agreement dated September 22, 1995 with LMC or any successor agreement;

Whereas, "TCI's and LMC's Turner-Related Businesses" means the businesses conducted by Southern Satellite Systems, Inc., a subsidiary of TCI which is principally in the business of distributing WTBS to MVPDs;

Whereas, "Liberty Tracking Stock" means Tele-Communications, Inc. Series A Liberty Media Group Common Stock and Tele-Communications, Inc. Series B Liberty Media Group Common Stock;

Whereas, Time Warner, Turner, TCI, and LMC are willing to enter into a Consent Order requiring them, inter alia, to forego entering into certain new programming service agreements for a period of six months from the date that the parties close this Acquisition ("Closing Date"), but, in order to comply more fully with that requirement, they must cancel now the two agreements that were negotiated as part of this Acquisition: namely, (1) the September 15, 1995, program service agreement between TCI's subsidiary, Satellite Services, Inc. ("SSI"), and Turner and (2) the September 14, 1995, cable carriage agreement between SSI and Time Warner for WTBS (hereafter "Two Programming Service Agreements");

Whereas, if the Commission accepts the attached Consent Order, the Commission is required to place the Consent Order on the public record for a period of at least sixty (60) days and may subsequently withdraw such acceptance pursuant to the provisions of Rule 2.34 of the Commission's Rules of Practice and Procedure, 16 CFR 2.34;

Whereas, the Commission is concerned that if the parties do not, before this order is made final, apply to the IRS for the IRS Ruling and cancel the Two Programming Service Agreements, compliance with the operative provisions of the Consent Order might not be possible or might produce a less than effective remedy;

Whereas, Time Warner, Turner, TCI, and LMC's entering into this Agreement shall in no way be construed as an admission by them that the Acquisition is illegal;

Whereas, Time Warner, Turner, TCI, and LMC understand that no act or transaction contemplated by this Agreement shall be deemed immune or exempt from the provisions of the antitrust laws of the Federal Trade Commission Act by reason of anything contained in this Agreement;

Now, therefore, upon understanding that the Commission has not yet determined whether the Acquisition will be challenged, and in consideration of the Commission's agreement that, unless the Commission determines to reject the Consent Order, it will not seek further relief from Time Warner, Turner, TCI, and LMC with respect to the Acquisition, except that the Commission may exercise any and all rights to enforce this Agreement and the Consent Order to which this Agreement is annexed and made a part thereof, the parties agree as follows:

1. Withing thirty (30) days of the date the Commission accepts the attached Consent Order for public comment, TCI and LMC shall apply to the IRS for the IRS Ruling.

2. On or before the Closing Date, Time Warner, Turner and TCI shall cancel the Two Programming Service Agreements.

3. This Agreement shall be binding when approved by the Commission.

APPENDIX II

STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN PITOFSKY, AND COMMISSIONERS STEIGER AND VARNEY

The merger and related transactions among Time Warner, Turner, and TCI involve three of the largest firms in cable programming and delivery -- firms that are actual or potential competitors in many aspects of their businesses. The transaction merges the first and third largest cable programmers (Time Warner and Turner). At the same time, absent the relief in our consent order, the transaction would have further aligned the interests of TCI and Time Warner, the two largest cable distributors. Finally, the transaction greatly increases the level of vertical integration in an industry in which the threat of foreclosure is both real and substantial.¹ While the transaction posed complicated and close questions of antitrust enforcement, the conclusion of the dissenters that there was no competitive problem at all is difficult to understand, especially since none of the public comments received suggested that relief was unnecessary.

Many of the concerns raised in the dissenting Commissioners statements are carefully addressed in the analysis to aid public comment, which we append to this statement. We write to clarify our views on certain specific issues raised in the dissents.

Product market. The dissenting Commissioners suggest that the product market alleged, "the sale of Cable Television Programming Services to MVPDs (Multichannel Video Programming Distributors)," cannot be sustained. The facts suggest otherwise. Substantial evidence, confirmed in the parties' documents and testimony, as well as documents and sworn statements from third-parties, indicated the existence of an all cable television market. Indeed, there was significant evidence of competitive interaction in terms of carriage, promotions and marketing support, subscriber fees, and channel position between different segments of cable programming, including basic and premium channel programming. Cable operators look to all types of cable programming to determine the proper mix of diverse content and format to attract a wide range of subscribers.

Although a market that includes both CNN and HBO may appear somewhat unusual on its face, the Commission was presented here with substantial evidence that MVPDs require access to certain "marquee" channels, such as HBO and CNN, to retain existing subscribers or expand their subscriber base. Moreover, we can not concur that evidence in the record supports Commissioner Azcuenaga's proposed market definition, which would segregate offerings into basic and premium cable programming markets.

Entry. Although we agree that entry is an important factor, we cannot concur with Commissioner Azcuenaga's overly generous view of entry conditions in this market. While new program channels have entered in the past few years, these channels have not become competitively significant. None of the channels that has entered since 1991 has acquired more than a 1% market share.

Moreover, the anticompetitive effects of this acquisition would have resulted from one firm's control of several marquee channels. In that aspect of the market, entry has proven slow and costly. The potential for new entry in basic services cannot guarantee against competitive harm. To state the matter simply, the launch of a new "Billiards Channel," "Ballet Channel," or the like will barely make a ripple on the shores of the marquee channels through which Time Warner can exercise market power.

Technology. Commissioner Azcuenaga also seems to suggest that the Commission has failed to recognize the impact of significant technological changes in the market, such as the emergence of new delivery systems such as direct broadcast satellite networks ("DBS").² We agree that these alternative technologies may someday become a significant competitive force in the market. Indeed, that prospect is one of the reasons the Commission has acted to prevent Time Warner from being able to disadvantage these competitors by discriminating in access to programming.

But to suggest that these technologies one day may become more widespread does not mean they currently are, or in the near future will be, important enough to defeat anticompetitive conduct. Alternative technologies such as DBS have only a small foothold in the market, perhaps a 3% share of total subscribers. Moreover, DBS is more costly and lacks the carriage of local stations. It seems rather unlikely that the emerging DBS technology is sufficient to prevent the competitive harm that would have arisen from this transaction.

Horizontal competitive effects. Although Commissioner Starek presents a lengthy argument on why we need not worry about the horizontal effects of the acquisition, the record developed in this investigation strongly suggests anticompetitive effects would have resulted without remedial action. This merger would combine the first and third largest providers of cable programming, resulting in a merged firm controlling over 40% of the market, and several of the key marquee channels including HBO and CNN. The horizontal concerns are strengthened by the fact that Time Warner and TCI are the two largest MVPDs in the country. The Commission staff received an unprecedented level of concern from participants in all segments of the market about the potential anticompetitive effects of this merger.

One of the most frequent concerns expressed was that the merger heightens the already formidable entry barriers into programming by further aligning the incentives of both Time Warner and TCI to deprive entrant of sufficient distribution outlets to achieve the necessary economies of scale. The order addresses the impact on entry barriers as follows. First, the prohibition on bundling would deter Time Warner from using the practice to compel MVPDs to accept unwanted channels which would further limit available channel capacity to non-Time Warner programmers. Second, the conduct and reporting requirements in paragraphs VII and VIII provide a mechanism for the Commission to become aware of situations where Time Warner discriminates in handling carriage requests from programming rivals.

Third, the order reduces entry barriers by eliminating the programming service agreements (PSAs), which would have required TCI to carry certain Turner networks until 2015, at a price set at the lower of 85% of the industry average price or the lowest price given to any other MVPD. The PSAs would have reduced the ability and incentives of TCI to handle programming from Time Warner's rivals. Channel space on cable systems is scarce. If the PSAs effectively locked up significant channel space on TCI, the ability of rival programmers to enter would have been harmed. This effect would have been exacerbated by the unusually long duration of the agreement and the fact that TCI would have received a 15% discount over the most favorable price given to any other MVPD. Eliminating the twenty-year PSAs and restricting the duration of future contracts between TCI and Time Warner will restore TCI's opportunities and incentives to evaluate and carry non-Time Warner programming.

We believe that his remedy carefully restricts potential anticompetitive practices arising from this acquisition that would have heightened entry barriers.

Vertical foreclosure. The complaint alleges that post-acquisition Time Warner and TCI would have the power to: (1) foreclose unaffiliated programming from their cable systems to protect their programming assets; and (2) disadvantage competing MVPDs, by engaging in price discrimination. Commissioner Azcuenaga contends that Time Warner and TCI lack the incentives and the ability to engage in either type of foreclosure. We disagree.

First, it is important to recognize the degree of vertical integration involved. Post-merger Time Warner alone controls more than 40% of the programming assets (as measured by subscriber revenue obtained by MVPDs). Time Warner and TCI, the nation's two largest MVPDs, control access to about 44% of all cable subscribers. The case law have found that these levels of concentration can be problematic.³

Second, the Commission received evidence that these foreclosure threats were real and substantial. There was clearly reason to believe that this acquisition would increase the incentives to engage in this foreclosure without remedial action. For example, the launch of a new channel that could achieve marquee status would be almost impossible without distribution on either the Time Warner or TCI cable systems. Because of the economies of scale involved, the successful launch of any significant new channel usually requires distribution on MVPDs that cover 40-60% of subscribers.

Commissioner Starek suggests that we need not worry about foreclosure because there are sufficient numbers of unaffiliated programmers and MVPDs so that each can survive by entering into contracts. With all due respect, this view ignores the competitive realities of the marketplace. TCI and Time Warner are the two largest MVPDs in the U.S. with market shares of 27% and 17% respectively.⁴ Carriage on one or both systems is critical for new programming to achieve competitive viability. Attempting to replicate the coverage of these systems by lacing together agreements with the larger number of much smaller MVPDs is costly and time consuming.⁵ The Commission was presented with evidence that denial of coverage on the Time Warner and TCI systems could further delay entry of potential marquee channels for several years.

TCI ownership of Time Warner. Commissioner Azcuenaga suggests that TCI's acquisition of a 15% interest in Time Warner, with the prospect of acquiring up to 25% without further antitrust review, does not pose any competitive problem. We disagree. Such a substantial ownership interest, especially in a highly concentrated market with substantial vertically interdependent relationships and high entry barriers, poses significant competitive concerns.⁶ In particular, the interest would give TCI greater incentives to disadvantage programmer competitors of Time Warner, similarly it would increase Time Warner's incentives to disadvantage MVPDs that compete with TCI. The Commission's remedy would eliminate these incentives to act anticompetitively by making TCI's interest truly passive.

Efficiencies. Finally, Commissioner Azcuenaga seems to suggest that the acquisition may result in certain efficiencies in terms of "more and better programming options" and "reduced transaction costs." There was little or no evidence presented to the Commission to suggest that these efficiencies were likely to occur.

Public comments. Although our colleagues did not address the issue of scope of relief, some public comments raised questions about the requirement that Time Warner carry an alternative news network to CNN. In particular, Fox News and Bloomberg stated that the effectiveness of the carriage requirement is undermined by the Commission's decision to allow Time Warner to select which competitor to carry. Both firms contend that Time Warner's incentive is to select the weakest competitor to CNN.

We do not agree that the carriage requirement is made ineffective by Time Warner's right to choose. The order ensures that Time Warner must select a programming service that has the potential to be competitive with CNN.

In addition, the Commission sought to avoid any requirement that may interfere with other Time Warner programming decisions. Thus, the order does not require, but it does permit, Time Warner to carry more than one additional news channel. Moreover, the order requires that Time Warner place the additional news channel on cable systems reaching at least half of its subscribers, but it is up to Time Warner to decide whether to go beyond that. Requiring a greater level of market penetration might have compelled Time Warner to drop current programming (or abandon planned programming) to make room for the CNN rival.

Finally, the Commission abstained from the role of selecting the rival to CNN. The Commission restricts its role in divestiture applications to simply determining whether the seller's selection meets the requirements of the order. In this case, there is even greater reason to avoid a more intrusive role, since programming content would be unavoidably implicated -- the selection of one competitor over another inevitably determines to some degree the content of the new entry. In addition, excessive involvement in the selection process could conflict with the goal that the antitrust laws, and antitrust remedies, are intended to protect competition, not competitors.

DISSENTING STATEMENT OF COMMISSIONER MARY L. AZCUENAGA

The Commission today issues a consent order to settle allegations that the acquisition by Time Warner Inc. ("Time Warner") of Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. ("Turner"), and related agreements with Tele-Communications, Inc. ("TCI"),¹ would be unlawful. Alleging that this transaction violates the law is possible only by abandoning the rigor of the Commission's usual analysis under Section 7 of the Clayton Act. To reach this result, the majority adopts a highly questionable market definition, ignores any consideration of efficiencies and blindly assumes difficulty of entry in the antitrust sense in the face of overwhelming evidence to the contrary. The decision of the majority also departs from more general principles of antitrust law by favoring competitors over competition and contrived theory over facts.

The usual analysis of competitive effects under the law, unlike the apparent analysis of the majority, would take full account of the swirling forces of innovation and technological advances in this dynamic industry. Unfortunately, the complaint and the underlying theories on which the order is based do not begin to satisfy the rigorous standard for merger analysis that this agency has applied for years. Instead, the majority employs a looser standard for liability and a regulatory order that threatens the likely efficiencies from the transaction. Having found no reason to relax our standards of analysis for this case, I cannot agree that the order is warranted.

PRODUCT MARKET

We focus in merger analysis on the likelihood that the transaction will create or enhance the ability to exercise market power, i.e., raise prices. The first step usually is to examine whether the merging firms sell products that are substitutes for one another to see if there is a horizontal competitive overlap. This is important in a case based on a theory of unilateral anticompetitive effects, as this one is, because ¹Liberty Media Corporation, a wholly-owned subsidiary of TCI, also is named in the complaint and order. For simplicity, references in this statement to TCI include Liberty.

the theory requires a showing that the products of the merging firms are the first and second choices for consumers.²

In this case, it could be argued from the perspective of cable system operators and other multichannel video program distributors ("MVPDs"), who are purchasers of programming services, that all video programming networks³ are substitutes. This is the horizontal competitive overlap that is alleged in the complaint.⁴

One problem with the alleged all-programming market is that basic cable programming services (such as Turner's CNN) and premium cable programming services (such as Time Warner's HBO) are not substitutes along the usual dimensions of competition. Most significantly, they do not compete on price. CNN is sold to MVPDs for a fee per subscriber that is on average less than one-tenth of the average price for HBO, and it is resold as part of a package of basic services for an inclusive fee. HBO is sold at wholesale for more than ten times as much; it is resold to consumers on an a la carte basis or in a package with other premium services, and a subscription to basic service usually is a prerequisite. It is highly unlikely that a cable operator, to avoid a price increase, would drop a basic channel and replace it with a significantly more expensive premium channel. Furthermore, cable system operators tell us that when the price for basic cable services increases, consumers drop pay services, suggesting that at least at the retail level these goods are complementary rather than substitutes for one another.

Another possible argument is that CNN and HBO should be in the same product market because from the cable operator's perspective, each is "necessary to attract and retain a significant percentage of their subscribers."⁵ If CNN and HBO were substitutes in this sense, ² See 1992 Horizontal Merger Guidelines ¶ 2.2. The theory is that when the post-merger firm raises the price on product A or on products A and B, sales lost due to the price increase on the first-choice product (A) will be diverted to the second-choice product (B). The price increase is unlikely to be profitable unless a significant share of consumers regard the products of the merged firm as their first and second choices.

⁴ Complaint ¶ 24. Note that this market excludes broadcast programming, which "is a primary source of programming for most viewers regardless of distribution media." Federal Communications Commission, Third Annual Report on the Status of Competition in the Market for the Delivery of Video Programming at 7 (Dec. 26, 1996) (hereafter "1996 FCC Report").

we would expect to see cable system operators playing them against one another to win price concessions in negotiations with programming sellers. But there is no evidence that they have been used in this way, and cable system operators have told us that basic and premium channels do not compete on price.⁶ There are closer substitutes, in terms of price and content, for CNN (in basic cable services) and for HBO (in premium cable services).

I am not persuaded that the product market alleged in the complaint could be sustained. CNN and HBO are not substitutes, and they are not the first and second choices for consumers (or for cable system operators or other MVPDs). There are no other horizontal overlaps warranting enforcement action in any other cable programming market.⁷ Under these circumstances, it would seem appropriate to withdraw the complaint.

ENTRY

The complaint alleges that entry is difficult and unlikely.⁸ This is an astonishing allegation, given the amount of entry in the cable programming market. The number of cable programming services or networks increased from 106 to 129 in 1995, according to the FCC.⁹ One source reported thirty national 24-hour networks expected to launch in 1996,¹⁰ and another source identified seventy-three networks "on the launch pad."¹¹ That adds up to between fifty-three and ninety-six new and announced video programming networks in two years. According to an industry trade association, thirty-three new basic networks and thirteen new premium networks were launched between 1992 and 1995.¹² Another source listed 141 national 24-hour cable networks launched or announced between January 1993 and March 1996.¹³

This does not mean that entry is easy or inexpensive. Not all the channels that have announced will launch a service, and not all those that launch will succeed.¹⁴ But some of them will. Some recent entrants include CNNfn (December 1995), Nick at Nite's TV Land (April 1996), MSNBC (July 1996), and the History Channel (January 1995).¹⁵ The Fox News Channel, offering twenty-four hour news, began service in October 1996, and Westinghouse and CBS Entertainment have announced that they will launch a new entertainment and information cable channel, Eye on People, in March 1997.¹⁶ The fact of so much ongoing entry indicates that at any given moment, entry from somewhere is imminent, and this, translated for purposes of antitrust analysis, means that entry should be regarded as virtually immediate.

Recent entrants have achieved some measure of success. TV Land reports 15 million subscribers (almost 24% of cable households) less than one year after its launch.¹⁷ The History Channel has obtained carriage to more than 40% of cable households in less than two years. Home & Garden Television, launched in December 1994, reports 18 million subscribers (more than 28% of cable households).¹⁸ The SciFi Channel, launched in September 1992, has 36 million subscribers

¹⁵ The History Channel reportedly had one million subscribers at its launch in January 1995, reached 8 million subscribers by the end of the year and was seen in 18 million homes by May 1996. Carter, "For History on Cable, the Time Has Arrived," N.Y. Times, May 20, 1996, at D1. The History Channel now reports more than 26 million subscribers (which accounts for more than 41% of basic cable television households). See 1996 NCTA at 57.

¹⁷ 1996 NCTA at 70. The percentage figure is derived from the number of subscribers for the network, divided by the number of basic cable households (62.8 million, as estimated by Paul Kagan Associates, Inc.), reported in 1996 NCTA. As a comparison, CNN has 69.9 million subscribers. 1996 NCTA at 39. HBO has 20.8 million subscribers (about one-third of basic cable households). Id. at 56.

(57% of cable households).¹⁹ The TV Food Network, launched in November 1993, reportedly has 21 million subscribers (about one-third of cable households).²⁰

New networks need not be successful or even launched before they can exert significant competitive pressure. Announced launches can affect pricing immediately. The launch of MSNBC and the announcement of Fox's cable news channel, for example, enabled cable system operators to mount credible threats to switch to one of the new news networks in negotiations with CNN, the incumbent all-news channel.²¹

Any constraint on cable channel capacity does not appear to be deterring entry of new networks. Indeed, the amount of entry that is occurring apparently reflects confidence that channel capacity will expand, for example, by digital technology. In addition, alternative MVPDs, such as direct broadcast satellite ("DBS"), may provide a launching platform for new networks.²² For example, CNNfn was launched in 1995 with 4 to 5 million households, divided between DBS and cable.²³

Nor should we ignore significant technological changes in video distribution that are affecting cable programming. One such change is the development and commercialization of new distribution methods that can provide alternatives for both cable programmers and subscribers. DBS is one example. With digital capacity, DBS can provide hundreds of channels to subscribers. By September 1995, DBS was available in all forty-eight contiguous states and Alaska.²⁴ In April 1996, DBS had 2.6 million customers; in August 1996, DBS had 3.34 million subscribers;²⁵ by the end of January 1997, DBS had more than 4.7 million subscribers²⁶ (compared to 62 million cable customers in the U.S.). AT&T last year invested $137.5 million in DirecTV, a DBS provider, began to sell satellite dishes and programming to its long distance customers in four markets, and planned to expand to the rest of the country in September 1996.²⁷ By the end of 1996, DirecTV had 2.3 million subscribers (up from 1.2 million in 1995²⁸), giving DirecTV more subscribers than all but the six largest cable system operators.²⁹ Echostar and AlphaStar both have launched DBS services, and MCI Communication and News Corp. last year announced a partnership to enter DBS.³⁰ Some industry analysts predict that DBS will serve 15 million subscribers by 2000.³¹ Direct broadcast satellite already is offering important competition for cable systems.³²

²¹ This is the kind of competition we would expect to see between cable networks that are substitutes for one another and the kind of competition that does not exist between CNN and HBO.

Digital technology, which would expand cable capacity to as many as 500 channels, is another important development. DBS already uses digital technology, and some cable operators were planning to begin providing digital service in 1996. Last fall, Discovery Communications (The Discovery Channel) announced four new programming services designed for digital boxes for TCI's

"digital box rollout."³³ (Even without digital service, cable systems have continued to upgrade their capacity; in 1994, about 64% of cable systems offered thirty to fifty-three channels, and more than 14% offered fifty-four or more channels.³⁴) Local telephone companies have entered as distributors via video dialtone, MMDS³⁵ and cable systems, and the telcos are exploring additional ways to enter video distribution markets.³⁶ Digital compression and advanced television technologies could make it possible for multiple programs to be broadcast over a single over-the-air broadcast channel.³⁷ When these developments will be fully realized is open to debate, but it is clear that they are on their way and affecting competition. According to one trade association official, cable operators are responding to competition by "upgrading their infrastructures with fiber optics and digital compression technologies to boost channel capacity What's more, cable operators are busily trying to polish their images with a public that has long registered gripes over pricing, customer service and programming choice."³⁸

Ongoing entry in programming suggests that no program seller could maintain an anticompetitive price increase and, therefore, there is no basis for liability under Section 7 of the Clayton Act. Changes in the video distribution market will put additional pressure on both cable systems and programming providers to be competitive by providing quality programming at reasonable prices. The quality and quantity of entry in the industry warrants dismissal of the complaint.

HORIZONTAL THEORY OF LIABILITY

The complaint alleges that Time Warner will be able to exploit its ownership of HBO and the Turner basic channels by "bundling"

Turner networks with HBO, that is, by selling them as a package.³⁹ As a basis for liability in a merger case, this appears to be without precedent.⁴⁰ Bundling is not always anticompetitive, and we cannot predict when bundling will be anticompetitive.⁴¹ Bundling can be used to transfer market power from the "tying" product to the "tied" product, but it also is used in many industries as a means of discounting. Popular cable networks, for example, have been sold in a package at a discount from the single product price. This can be a way for a programmer to encourage cable system operators to carry multiple networks and achieve cross-promotion among the networks in the package. Even if it seemed more likely than not that Time Warner would package HBO with Turner networks after the merger, we could not a priori identify this as an anticompetitive effect.

The alleged violation rests on a theory that the acquisition raises the potential for unlawful tying. To the best of my knowledge, Section 7 of the Clayton Act has never been extended to such a situation. There are two reasons not to adopt the theory here. First, challenging the mere potential to engage in such conduct appears to fall short of the "reasonable probability" standard under Section 7 of the Clayton Act. We do not seek to enjoin mergers on the mere possibility that firms in the industry may later choose to engage in unlawful conduct. It is difficult to imagine a merger that could not be enjoined if "mere possibility" of unlawful conduct were the standard. Here, the likelihood of anticompetitive effects is even more removed, because tying, the conduct that might possibly occur, in turn might or might not prove to be unlawful. Second, anticompetitive tying is unlawful, and Time Warner would risk private law suits and public law enforcement action for such conduct.

The remedy for the alleged bundling is to prohibit it,⁴² with no attempt to distinguish efficient bundling from anticompetitive bundling.⁴³ Assuming liability on the basis of an anticompetitive horizontal overlap, the obvious remedy would be to enjoin the transaction or to require the divestiture of HBO. Divestiture is a simple, easily reviewable and complete remedy for an anticompetitive horizontal overlap. The weakness of the Commission's case seems to be the only impediment to imposing that remedy here.

VERTICAL THEORIES

The complaint also alleges two vertical theories of competitive harm. The first is foreclosure of unaffiliated programming from Time Warner and TCI cable systems.⁴⁴ The second is anticompetitive price discrimination against competing MVPDs in the sale of cable programming.⁴⁵ Neither of these alleged outcomes appears particularly likely.

FORECLOSURE

Time Warner cannot foreclose the programming market by refusing carriage on its cable system, because Time Warner has less than 20% of cable television subscribers in the United States. Even if TCI were willing to join in an attempt to barricade programming produced by others from distribution, TCI and Time Warner together control less than 50% of the cable television subscribers in the country. In that case, entry of programming via cable might be more expensive (because of the costs of obtaining carriage on a number of smaller systems), but it need not be foreclosed.⁴⁶ And even if Time Warner and TCI together controlled a greater share of cable systems, the availability of alternative distributors of video programming and

⁴³ Although the proposed order would permit any bundling that Time Warner or Turner could have implemented independently before the merger, the reason for this distinction appears unrelated to distinguishing between pro- and anti-competitive bundling.

⁴⁵ Complaint ¶ 38c.

⁴⁶ According to the FCC, "[t]he available evidence suggests that a successful launch of a new mass market national programming network -- that is, the initial subscriber requirement for long-term success -- requires that the new channel be available to at least ten to twenty million households," which amounts to about 16% to 32% of cable households. 1996 FCC Report ¶ 135 (footnote omitted). Cf. the reply of the majority, at 7 ("the successful launch of any significant new channel usually requires distribution on MVPDs that cover 40-60% of subscribers") (Separate Statement of Chairman Pitofsky, and Commissioners Steiger and Varney, Time Warner Inc., Docket C-3709).

the technological advances that are expanding cable channel capacity make foreclosure as a result of this transaction improbable.

The foreclosure theory also is inconsistent with the incentives of the market. Cable systems operators want more and better programming, to woo and win subscribers. To support their cable systems, Time Warner and TCI must satisfy their subscribers by providing programming that subscribers want at reasonable prices. Given competing distributors and expanding channel capacity, neither of them likely would find it profitable to attempt to exclude new programming.

TCI as a shareholder of Time Warner, as the transaction was proposed to us (with a minority share of less than 10%), would have no greater incentive than it had as a 23% shareholder of Turner to protect Turner programming from competitive entry. Indeed, TCI's incentive to protect Turner programming would appear to be diminished.⁴⁷ If TCI's interest in Time Warner increased, it stands to reason that TCI's interest in the well-being of the Turner networks also would increase. But it is important to remember that TCI's principal source of income is its cable operations, and its share of Time Warner profits from Turner programming would appear to be insufficient incentive for TCI to jeopardize its cable business.⁴⁸ It may be that TCI could acquire an interest in Time Warner that could have anticompetitive consequences, but the Commission should analyze that transaction when and if TCI increases its holdings.

Another aspect of the foreclosure theory alleged in the complaint is a carriage agreement (programming service agreement or PSA) between TCI and Turner. Under the PSA, TCI would carry certain Turner networks for twenty years, at a discount from the average price at which Time Warner sells the Turner networks to other cable operators. The complaint alleges that TCI's obligations under the PSA would diminish TCI's incentives and ability to carry programming that competes with Turner programming,⁴⁹ which in turn would raise barriers to entry for unaffiliated programming. The increased difficulty of entry, so the theory goes, would in turn enable Time

⁴⁸ Looking only at cash flow, even if its share of Time Warner were increased to 18%, TCI's interest in the combined Time Warner/Turner would be only slightly greater than TCI's pre-transaction interest in Turner, and it still would amount to only an insignificant fraction of the cash flow generated by TCI's cable operations.

Warner to raise the price of Turner programming sold to cable operators and other MVPDs.

It is hard to see that the PSA would have anticompetitive effects. TCI already has contracts with Turner that provide for mandatory carriage of CNN and TNT, and TCI is likely to continue to carry these programming networks for the foreseeable future.⁵⁰ The current agreements do not raise antitrust issues, and the PSA raises no new ones. Any theoretical bottleneck on existing systems would be even further removed by the time the carriage requirements under the PSA would have become effective (when existing carriage agreements expire), because technological changes will have expanded cable channel capacity and alternative MVPDs will have expanded their subscribership. The PSA could even give TCI incentives to compete with Time Warner's programming and keep TCI's costs down.⁵¹ The PSA would have afforded Time Warner long term carriage for the Turner networks, provided TCI with long term programming commitments with some price protection, and eliminated the costs of renegotiating a number of existing Turner/TCI carriage agreements as they expire. These are efficiencies. No compelling reason has been advanced for requiring that the carriage agreement be cancelled.⁵²

In addition to divestiture by TCI of its Time Warner shares and cancellation of the TCI/Turner carriage agreement, the proposed remedies for the alleged foreclosure include:

(1) Antidiscrimination provisions by which Time Warner must abide in dealing with program providers;⁵³ (2) recordkeeping requirements to police compliance with the antidiscrimination provision;⁵⁴ and (3) a requirement that Time Warner carry "at least one Independent Advertising-Supported News and Information

⁵² See Order ¶ IV. There would appear to be even less justification for cancelling the PSA in light of the requirements (Order ¶¶ II & III) that TCI spin off or cap its shareholdings in Time Warner.

National Video Programming Service."⁵⁵ These remedial provisions are unnecessary, and they may be harmful.

Paragraph VII of the order, the antidiscrimination provision, seeks to protect unaffiliated programming vendors from exploitation and discrimination by Time Warner. The order provision is taken almost verbatim from a regulation of the Federal Communications Commission.⁵⁶ It is highly unusual, to say the least, for an order of the FTC to require compliance with a law enforced by another federal agency, and it is unclear what expertise we might bring to the process of assuring such compliance. Although a requirement to obey existing law and FCC regulations may not appear to burden Time Warner unduly, the additional burden of complying with the FTC order may be costly for both Time Warner and the FTC. In addition to imposing extensive recordkeeping requirements,⁵⁷ the order apparently would create another forum for unhappy programmers, who could seek to instigate an FTC investigation of Time Warner's compliance with the order, instead of or in addition to citing the same conduct in a complaint filed with and adjudicated by the FCC.⁵⁸ The burden of attempting to enforce compliance with FCC regulations is one that this agency need not and should not assume.

The order also requires Time Warner to carry an independent all-news channel.⁵⁹ This requirement is entirely unwarranted. A duty to deal might be appropriate on a sufficient showing if Time Warner were a monopolist. But with less than 20% of cable subscribers in the United States, Time Warner is neither a monopolist nor an "essential facility" in cable distribution.⁶⁰ CNN, the apparent target of the FTC-sponsored entry, also is not a monopolist but is one of many cable programming services in the all-programming market alleged in the complaint. Clearly, CNN also is one of many sources of news and

⁵⁶ See 47 CFR 76.1301(a)-(c).

⁵⁸ See 47 CFR 76.1302. The FCC may mandate carriage and impose prices, terms and other conditions of carriage.

⁵⁹ Order ¶ IX.

⁶⁰ Even in New York City, undoubtedly an important media market, available data indicate that Time Warner apparently serves only about one-quarter of cable households. See Cablevision, May 13, 1996, at 57; April 29, 1996, at 13. (Time Warner has about 1.1 million subscribers in New York, which has about 4.5 million cable households). We do not have data about alternative MVPD subscribers in the New York area.

information readily available to the public, although neither televised news programming nor ad-supported cable TV news programming is a market alleged in the complaint.

Antitrust law, properly applied, provides no justification whatsoever for the government to help establish a competitor for CNN on the Time Warner cable systems. Nor is there any apparent reason, other than the circular reason that it would be helpful to them, why Microsoft, NBC or Fox needs a helping hand from the FTC in their new programming endeavors. CNN and other programming networks did not obtain carriage mandated by the FTC when they launched; why should the Commission now tilt the playing field in favor of other entrants?

PRICE DISCRIMINATION

The complaint alleges that Time Warner could discriminatorily raise the prices of programming services to its MVPD rivals,⁶¹ presumably to protect its cable operations from competition. This theory assumes that Time Warner has market power in the all-cable programming market. As discussed above, however, there are reasons to think that the alleged all-cable programming market would not be sustained, and entry into cable programming is widespread and, because of the volume of entry, immediate. Under the circumstances, it appears not only not likely but virtually inconceivable that Time Warner could sustain any attempt to exercise market power in the alleged all-cable programming market.

Whatever the merits of the theory in this case, however, discrimination against competing MVPDs in price or other terms of sale of programming is prohibited by federal statute⁶² and by FCC regulations,⁶³ and the FCC provides a forum to adjudicate complaints of this nature. Unfortunately, the majority is not content to leave policing of telecommunications to the FCC.

The order addresses the alleged violation in the following way: (1) it requires Time Warner to provide Turner programming to competing MVPDs on request; and (2) it establishes a formula for determining the prices that Time Warner can charge MVPDs for Turner programming in areas in which Time Warner cable systems and the MVPDs compete.⁶⁴ The provision is inconsistent with two antitrust principles. Antitrust traditionally does not impose a duty to deal absent monopoly, which does not exist here, and antitrust traditionally has not viewed price regulation as an appropriate remedy for market power. Indeed, price regulation usually is seen as antithetical to antitrust.

Although the provision ostensibly has the same nondiscrimination goal as federal telecommunications law and FCC regulations, the bright line standard in the proposed order for determining a nondiscriminatory price fails to take account of the circumstances Congress has identified in telecommunications statutes in which price differences could be justified, such as, for example, cost differences, economies of scale or "other direct and legitimate economic benefits reasonably attributable to the number of subscribers serviced by the distributor."⁶⁵ These are significant omissions, particularly for an agency that has taken pride in its mission to prevent unfair methods of competition and, in so doing, to identify and take account of efficiencies. There is no apparent reason or authority for creating this exception to a congressional mandate. To the extent that the proposed order creates a regulatory scheme different from that afforded by Congress and the FCC, disgruntled MVPDs may find it to their advantage to seek sanctions against Time Warner at the FTC.⁶⁶ This is likely to be costly for the FTC and for Time Warner, and the differential scheme of regulation also could impose other, unforeseen costs on the industry.

EFFICIENCIES

As far as I can tell, the consent order entirely ignores the likely efficiencies of the proposed transaction. The potential vertical efficiencies include more and better programming options for consumers and reduced transaction costs for the merging firms. The potential horizontal efficiencies include savings from the integration of overlapping operations and of film and animation libraries. For many years, the Commission has devoted considerable time and effort to identifying and evaluating efficiencies that may result from proposed mergers and acquisitions. Although cognizable efficiencies occur less frequently than one might expect, the Commission has not stinted in its efforts to give every possible consideration to efficiencies. That makes the apparent disinterest in the potential efficiencies of this transaction decidedly odd.

INDUSTRY COMPLAINTS

We have heard many expressions of concern about the transaction. Cable system operators and alternative MVPDs have been concerned about the price and availability of programming from Time Warner after the acquisition. Program providers have been concerned about access to Time Warner's cable system. These are understandable concerns, and I am sympathetic to them. To the extent that these industry members want assured supply or access and protected prices, however, this is (or should be) the wrong agency to help them. Because Time Warner cannot foreclose either level of service and is neither a monopolist nor an "essential facility" in the programming market or in cable services, there would appear to be no basis in antitrust for the access requirements imposed in the order.

The Federal Communications Commission is the agency charged by Congress with regulating the telecommunications industry, and the FCC already has rules in place prohibiting discriminatory prices and practices. While there may be little harm in requiring Time Warner to comply with communications law, there also is little justification for this agency to undertake the task. To the extent that the consent order offers a standard different from that promulgated by Congress and the FCC, it arguably is inconsistent with the will of Congress. To the extent that the consent order would offer a more attractive remedy for complaints from disfavored competitors and customers of Time Warner, they are more likely to turn to us than to the FCC. There is much to be said for having the FTC confine itself to FTC matters, leaving FCC matters to the FCC.

I dissent.

DISSENTING STATEMENT OF COMMISSIONER ROSCOE B. STAREK, III

I respectfully dissent from the Commission's decision to issue a complaint and final order against Time Warner Inc. ("TW"), Turner Broadcasting System, Inc. ("TBS"), Tele-Communications, Inc. ("TCI"), and Liberty Media Corporation. The complaint against these producers and distributors of cable television programming alleges anticompetitive effects arising from (1) the horizontal integration of the programming interests of TW and TBS and (2) the vertical integration of TBS's programming interests with TW's and TCI's distribution interests. I am not persuaded that either the horizontal or the vertical aspects of this transaction are likely "substantially to lessen competition" in violation of Section 7 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. 18, or otherwise to constitute "unfair methods of competition" in violation of Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, 15 U.S.C. 45. Moreover, even if one were to assume the validity of one or more theories of violation underlying this action, the order does not appear to prevent the alleged effects and may instead create inefficiency.

HORIZONTAL THEORIES OF COMPETITIVE HARM

This transaction involves, inter alia, the combination of TW and TBS, two major suppliers of programming to multichannel video program distributors ("MVPDs"). Accordingly, there is a straightforward theory of competitive harm that merits serious consideration by the Commission. In its most general terms, the theory is that cable operators regard TW programs as close substitutes for TBS programs. Therefore, the theory says, TW and TBS act as premerger constraints on each other's ability to raise program prices. Under this hypothesis, the merger eliminates this constraint, allowing TW -- either unilaterally or in coordination with other program vendors -- to raise prices on some or all of its programs.

Of course, this story is essentially an illustration of the standard theory of competitive harm set forth in Section 2 of the 1992 Horizontal Merger Guidelines.¹ Were an investigation pursuant to this theory to yield convincing evidence that it applies to the current transaction, under most circumstances the Commission would seek injunctive relief to prevent the consolidation of the assets in question.

The Commission has eschewed that course of action, however, choosing instead a very different sort of "remedy" that allows the parties to proceed with the transaction but restricts them from engaging in some (but not all) "bundled" sales of programming to unaffiliated cable operators.² Clearly, this choice of relief implies an unusual theory of competitive harm from what ostensibly is a straightforward horizontal transaction. The Commission's remedy does nothing to prevent the most obvious manifestation of postmerger market power -- an across-the-board price increase for TW and TBS programs. Why has the Commission forgone its customary relief directed against its conventional theory of harm?

The plain answer is that there is little persuasive evidence that TW's programs constrain those of TBS (or vice-versa) in the fashion described above. In a typical FTC horizontal merger enforcement action, the Commission relies heavily on documentary evidence establishing the substitutability of the parties' products or services.³ For example, it is standard to study the parties' internal documents to determine which producers they regard as their closest competitors. This assessment also depends frequently on internal documents supplied by customers that show them playing off one supplier against another -- via credible threats of supplier termination -- in an effort to obtain lower prices.

In this matter, however, documents of this sort are conspicuous by their absence. Notwithstanding a voluminous submission of ² In the Analysis of Proposed Consent Order to Aid Public Comment (Section IV.C) that it released in connection with acceptance of the consent agreement in this case, the Commission asserted that "the easiest way the combined firm could exert substantially greater negotiating leverage over cable operators is by combining all or some of such 'marquee' services and offering them as a package or offering them along with unwanted programming." As I note below, it is far from obvious why this bundling strategy represents the "easiest" way to exercise market power against cable operators. The easiest way to exercise any newly-created market power would be simply to announce higher programming prices.

³ The Merger Guidelines emphasize the importance of such evidence. Section 1.11 specifically identifies the following two types of evidence as particularly informative: "(1) evidence that buyers have shifted or have considered shifting purchases between products in response to relative changes in price or other competitive variables [and] (2) evidence that sellers base business decisions on the prospect of buyer substitution between products in response to relative changes in price or other competitive variables."

To illustrate, in Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of the Southwest, Docket No. 9215, complaint counsel argued in favor of a narrow product market consisting of "all branded carbonated soft drinks" ("CSDs"), while respondent argued for a much broader market. In determining that all branded CSDs constituted the relevant market, the Commission placed great weight on internal documents from local bottlers of branded CSDs showing that those bottlers "[took] into account only the prices of other branded CSD products [and not the prices of private label or warehouse-delivered soft drinks] in deciding on pricing for their own branded CSD products." 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 23,681 at 23,413 (Aug. 31, 1994), vacated and remanded on other grounds, Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of the Southwest v. FTC, 85 F.3d 1139 (5th Cir. 1996). (The Commission dismissed its complaint on September 6, 1996.)

materials from the respondents and third parties (and the considerable incentives of the latter -- especially other cable operators -- to supply the Commission with such documents), there are no documents that reveal cable operators threatening to drop a TBS "marquee" network (e.g., CNN) in favor of a TW "marquee" network (e.g., HBO). There also are no documents from, for instance, TW suggesting that it sets the prices of its "marquee" networks in reference to those of TBS, taking into account the latter's likely competitive response to unilateral price increases or decreases. Rather, the evidence supporting any prediction of a postmerger price increase consists entirely of customers' contentions that program prices would rise following the acquisition. Although customers' opinions on the potential effects of a transaction often are important, they seldom are dispositive. Typically the Commission requires substantial corroboration of these opinions from independent information sources.⁴

Independent validation of the anticompetitive hypothesis becomes particularly important when key elements of the story lack credibility. For a standard horizontal theory of harm to apply here, one key element is that, prior to the acquisition, an MVPD could credibly threaten to drop a marquee network (e.g., CNN), provided it had access to another programmer's marquee network (e.g., HBO) that it could offer to potential subscribers. This threat would place the MVPD in a position to negotiate a better price for the marquee networks than if those networks were jointly owned.

Here, the empirical evidence gathered during the investigation reveals that such threats would completely lack credibility. Indeed, there appears to be little, if any, evidence that such threats ever have been made, let alone carried out. CNN and HBO are not substitutes, and both are carried on virtually all cable systems nationwide. If, as ⁴ For example, in R.R. Donnelley Sons & Co., et al., Docket No. 9243, the Administrative Law Judge's decision favoring complaint counsel rested in part on his finding that "[a]s soon as the Meredith/Burda acquisition was announced, customers expressed concern to the FTC and the parties about the decrease in competition that might result." (Initial Decision Finding 404.) In overturning the ALJ's decision, the Commission cautioned: "There is some danger in relying on these customer complaints to draw any general conclusions about the likely effects of the acquisition or about the analytical premises for those conclusions. The complaints are consistent with a variety of effects, and many -- including those the ALJ relied upon -- directly contradict [c]omplaint [c]ounsel's prediction of unilateral price elevation." 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 23,876 at 23,660 n.189 (July 21, 1995).

Also, in several instances involving hospital mergers in concentrated markets, legions of third parties came forth to attest to the transaction's efficiency. The Commission has discounted this testimony, however, when these third parties could not articulate or document the source of the claimed efficiency, or when the testimony lacked corroboration from independent information sources. I believe that the Commission should apply the same evidentiary standards to the third-party testimony in the current matter.

a conventional horizontal theory of harm requires, these program services are truly substitutes -- if MVPDs regularly play one off against the other, credibly threatening to drop one in favor of another -- then why are there virtually no instances in which an MVPD has carried out this threat by dropping one of the marquee services? The absence of this behavior by MVPDs undermines the empirical basis for the asserted degree of substitutability between the two program services.⁵

Faced with this pronounced lack of evidence to support a conventional market power story and a conventional remedy, the Commission has sought refuge in what appears to be a very different theory of postmerger competitive behavior. This theory posits an increased likelihood of program "bundling" as a consequence of the transaction.⁶ But there are two major problems with this theory as a basis for an enforcement action. First, there is no strong theoretical or empirical basis for believing that an increase in bundling of TW and TBS programming would occur postmerger. Second, even if such bundling did occur, there is no particular reason to think that it would be competitively harmful.

Given the lack of documentary evidence to show that TW intends to bundle its programming with that of TBS, I do not understand why the majority considers an increase in program bundling to be a likely feature of the postmerger equilibrium, nor does economic theory supply a compelling basis for this prediction. Indeed, the rationale for this element of the case (as set forth in the Analysis to Aid Public Comment) can be described charitably as "incomplete." According to the Analysis, unless the FTC prevents it, TW would undertake a bundling strategy in part to foist "unwanted programming" upon cable operators.⁷ Missing from the Analysis, however, is any sensible

⁵ In virtually any case involving less pressure to come up with something to show for the agency's strenuous investigative efforts, the absence of such evidence would lead the Commission to reject a hypothesized product market that included both marquee services. Suppose that two producers of product A proposed to merge and sought to persuade the Commission that the relevant market also included product B, but they could not provide any examples of actual substitution of B for A, or any evidence that threats of substitution of B for A actually elicited price reductions from sellers of A. In the usual run of cases, this lack of substitutability would almost surely lead the Commission to reject the expanded market definition. But not so here.

⁷ As I have noted, supra n.2, the Analysis also claimed that TW could obtain "substantially greater negotiating leverage over cable operators . . . by combining all or some of [the merged firm's] 'marquee' services and offering them as a package . . ." If the Analysis used the term "negotiating leverage" to mean "market power" as the latter is conventionally defined, then it confronts three difficulties: (1) the record fails to support the proposition that the TW and TBS "marquee" channels explanation of why TW should wish to pursue this strategy, because the incentives to do so are not obvious.⁸

A possible anticompetitive rationale for "bundling" might run as follows: by requiring cable operators to purchase a bundle of TW and TBS programs that contains substantial amounts of "unwanted" programming, TW can tie up scarce channel capacity and make entry by new programmers more difficult. But even if that strategy were assumed arguendo to be profitable,⁹ the order would have only a trivial impact on TW's ability to pursue it. The order prohibits only the bundling of TW programming with TBS programming; TW remains free under the order to create new "bundles" comprising exclusively TW, or exclusively TBS, programs. Given that many TW and TBS programs are now sold on an unbundled basis -- a fact that are close substitutes for each other; (2) even assuming that those channels are close substitutes, there are more straightforward ways for TW to exercise postmerger market power; and (3) the remedy does nothing to prevent these more straightforward exercises of market power. See discussion supra.

⁸ In "A Note on Block Booking" in THE ORGANIZATION OF INDUSTRY (1968), George Stigler analyzed the practice of "block booking" -- or, in current parlance, "bundling" -- "marquee" motion pictures with considerably less popular films. Some years earlier, the United States Supreme Court had struck this practice down as an anticompetitive "leveraging" of market power from desirable to undesirable films. United States v. Loew's Inc., 371 U.S. 38 (1962). As Stigler explained (at 165), it is not obvious why distributors should wish to force exhibitors to take the inferior film:

Consider the following simple example. One film, Justice Goldberg cited Gone with the Wind, is worth $10,000 to the buyer, while a second film, the Justice cited Gettling Gertie's Garter, is worthless to him. The seller could sell the one for $10,000, and throw away the second, for no matter what its cost, bygones are forever bygones. Instead the seller compels the buyer to take both. But surely he can obtain no more than $10,000, since by hypothesis this is the value of both films to the buyer. Why not, in short, use his monopoly power directly on the desirable film? It seems no more sensible, on this logic, to block book the two films than it would be to compel the exhibitor to buy Gone with the Wind and seven Ouija boards, again for $10,000.

⁹ The argument here basically is a variant of the argument often used to condemn exclusive dealing as a tool for monopolizing a market. Under this argument, an upstream monopolist uses its market power to obtain exclusive distribution rights from its distributors, thereby foreclosing potential manufacturing entrants and obtaining additional market power. But there is [sic] problem with this argument, as Bork explains in THE ANTITRUST PARADOX (1978):

[The monopolist] can extract in the prices it charges retailers all that the uniqueness of its line is worth. It cannot charge the retailer that full worth in money and then charge it again in exclusivity the retailer does not wish to grant. To suppose that it can is to commit the error of double counting. If [the firm] must forgo the higher prices it could have demanded in order to get exclusivity, then exclusivity is not an imposition, it is a purchase.

Id. at 306; see also id. at 140-43.

Although modern economic theory has established the theoretical possibility that a monopolist might, under very specific circumstances, outbid an entrant for the resources that would allow entry to occur (thus preserving the monopoly), modern theory also has shown that this is not a generally applicable result. It breaks down, for example, when (as is likely in MVPD markets) many units of new capacity are likely to become available sequentially. See, e.g., Krishna, "Auctions with Endogenous Valuations: The Persistence of Monopoly Revisited," 83 Am. Econ. Rev. 147 (1993); Malueg and Schwartz, "Preemptive investment, toehold entry, and the mimicking principle," 22 RAND J. Econ. 1 (1991).

calls into question the likelihood of increased postmerger bundling¹⁰ -- and given that, under the majority's bundling theory, any TW or TBS programming can tie up a cable channel and thereby displace a potential entrant's programming, the order hardly would constrain TW's opportunities to carry out this "foreclosure" strategy.

Finally, all of the above analysis implicitly assumes that the bundling of TW and TBS programming, if undertaken, would more likely than not be anticompetitive. The Analysis to Aid Public Comment, however, emphasizes that bundling programming in many other instances can be procompetitive. There seems to be no explanation of why the particular bundles at issue here would be anticompetitive, and no articulation of the principles that might be used to differentiate welfare-enhancing from welfare-reducing bundling.¹¹

Thus, I am neither convinced that increased program bundling is a likely consequence of this transaction nor persuaded that any such bundling would be anticompetitive. Were I convinced that anticompetitive bundling is a likely consequence of this transaction, I would find the remedy inadequate.

VERTICAL THEORIES OF COMPETITIVE HARM

The consent order also contains a number of provisions designed to alleviate competitive harm purportedly arising from the increased degree of vertical integration between program suppliers and program distributors brought about by this transaction.¹² I have previously expressed my skepticism about enforcement actions predicated on theories of harm from vertical relationships.¹³ The current complaint and order only serve to reinforce my doubts about such enforcement actions and about remedies ostensibly designed to address the alleged competitive harms.

The vertical theories of competitive harm posited in this matter, and the associated remedies, are strikingly similar to those to which I objected in Silicon Graphics, Inc. ("SGI"), and the same essential criticisms apply. In SGI, the Commission's complaint alleged anticompetitive effects arising from the vertical integration of SGI -- the leading manufacturer of entertainment graphics workstations -- with Alias Research, Inc., and Wavefront Technologies, Inc. -- two leading suppliers of entertainment graphics software. Although the acquisition seemingly raised straightforward horizontal competitive problems arising from the combination of Alias and Wavefront, the Commission inexplicably found that the horizontal consolidation was not anticompetitive on net.¹⁴ Instead, the order addressed only the alleged vertical problems arising from the transaction. The Commission alleged, inter alia, that the acquisitions in SGI would reduce competition through two types of foreclosure: (1) nonintegrated software vendors would be excluded from the SGI platform, thereby inducing their exit (or deterring their entry); and (2) rival hardware manufacturers would be denied access to Alias and Wavefront software, without which they could not effectively compete against SGI. Similarly, in this case the Commission alleges (1) that nonintegrated program vendors will be excluded from TW and TCI cable systems and (2) that potential MVPD entrants into TW's cable markets will be denied access to (or face supracompetitive prices for) TW and TBS programming -- thus lessening their ability to effectively compete against TW's cable operations. The complaint further charges that the exclusion of nonintegrated program vendors from TW's and TCI's cable systems will deprive those vendors of scale economies, render them ineffective competitors vis-à-vis the TW/Turner programming services, and thus confer market power on TW as a seller of programs to MVPDs in non-TW/non-TCI markets.

My dissenting statement in SGI identified the problems with this kind of analysis. For one thing, these two types of foreclosure -- foreclosure of independent program vendors from the TW and TCI cable systems, and foreclosure of independent MVPD firms from TW and TBS programming -- tend to be mutually exclusive. The very possibility of excluding independent program vendors from TW and TCI cable systems suggests the means by which MVPDs other than TW and TCI can avoid foreclosure. The nonintegrated program vendors surely have incentives to supply the "foreclosed" MVPDs,¹⁵ and each MVPD has incentives to induce nonintegrated program suppliers to produce programming for it.¹⁶

In response to this criticism, one might argue -- and the complaint alleges¹⁷ -- that pervasive scale economies in programming, combined with a failure to obtain carriage on the TW and TCI systems, would doom potential programming entrants (and "foreclosed" incumbent programmers) because, without TW and/or TCI carriage, they would be deprived of the scale economies essential to their survival. In other words, the argument goes, the competitive responses of "foreclosed" programmers and "foreclosed" distributors identified in the preceding paragraph never will materialize. There are, however, substantial conceptual and empirical problems with this argument, and its implications for competition policy have not been fully explored.

First, if one believes that programming is characterized by such substantial scale economies that the loss of one large customer results in the affected programmer's severely diminished competitive effectiveness (in the limit, that programmer's exit), then this essentially is an argument that the number of program producers that can survive in equilibrium (or, perhaps more accurately, the number of program producers in a particular program "niche") will be small -- with perhaps only one survivor. Under the theory of the current case, this will result in a supracompetitive price for that program. Further, this will occur irrespective of the degree of vertical integration between programmers and distributors. Indeed, under these circumstances, there is a straightforward reason why vertical integration between a program distributor and a program producer would be both profitable and procompetitive (i.e., likely to result in lower prices to consumers): instead of monopoly markups by both the program producer and the MVPD, there would be only one markup by the vertically integrated firm.¹⁸

¹⁶ Moreover, as was also true in SGI, the complaint in the present case characterizes premerger entry conditions in a way that appears to rule out significant anticompetitive foreclosure of nonintegrated upstream producers as a consequence of the transaction. Paragraphs 33, 34, and 36 of the complaint allege in essence that there are few producers of "marquee" programming before the merger (other than TW and TBS), in large part because entry into "marquee" programming is so very difficult (stemming from, e.g., the substantial irreversible investments that are required). If that is true -- i.e., if the posited programming market already was effectively foreclosed before the merger -- then, as in SGI, TW's acquisition of TBS could not cause substantial postmerger foreclosure of competitively significant alternatives to TW/TBS programming

Second, and perhaps more important, if the reasoning of the complaint is carried to its logical conclusion, it constitutes a basis for challenging any vertical integration by large cable operators or large programmers -- even if that vertical integration were to occur via de novo entry by an operator into the programming market, or by de novo entry by a programmer into distribution. Consider the following hypothetical: A large MVPD announces both that it intends to enter a particular program niche and that it plans to drop the incumbent supplier of that type of programming. According to the theory underlying the complaint, the dropped program would suffer substantially from lost scale economies, severely diminishing its competitive effectiveness, which in turn would confer market power on the vertically integrated entrant in its program sales to other MVPDs. Were the Commission to apply its current theory of competitive harm consistently, it evidently would have to find this de novo entry into programming by this large MVPD competitively objectionable.

I suspect, of course, that virtually no one would be comfortable challenging such integration, since there is a general predisposition to regard expansions of capacity as procompetitive.¹⁹ Consequently, one might attempt to reconcile the differential treatment of the two forms of vertical integration by somehow distinguishing them from each other.²⁰ But in truth, the situations actually merit similar treatment -- albeit not the treatment prescribed by the order. In neither case should an enforcement action be brought, because any welfare loss flowing from either scenario derives from the structure of the upstream market, which in turn is determined primarily by the size of the market and by technology, not by the degree of vertical integration between different stages of production.

Third, it is far from clear that TCI's incentives to preclude entry into programming are the same as TW's.²¹ As an MVPD, TCI is harmed by the creation of entry barriers to new programming. Even if TW supplies it with TW programming at a competitive price, TCI is still harmed if program variety or innovation is diminished. On the other hand, as a part owner of TW, TCI benefits if TW's programming earns supracompetitive returns on sales to other MVPDs. TCI's net incentive to sponsor new programming depends on which factor dominates -- its interest in program quality and innovation, or its interest in supracompetitive returns on TW programming. All of the analyses of which I am aware concerning this tradeoff show that TCI's ownership interest in TW would have to increase substantially -- far beyond what the current transaction contemplates, or what would be possible without a significant ²⁰ One might attempt to differentiate my hypothetical from a situation involving an MVPD's acquisition of a program supplier by arguing that the former would yield two suppliers of the relevant type of programming, but the latter only one. But this conclusion would be incorrect. If we assume that the number of suppliers that can survive in equilibrium is determined by the magnitude of scale economies relative to the size of the market, and that the pre-entry market structure represented an equilibrium, then the existence of two program suppliers will be only a transitory phenomenon, and the market will revert to the equilibrium structure dictated by these technological considerations -- that is, one supplier. Upstream integration by the MVPD merely replaces one program monopolist with another; but as noted above, under these circumstances vertical integration can yield substantial efficiencies.

²¹ Even TW has mixed incentives to preclude programming entry. As a programmer allegedly in possession of market power, TW would wish to deter programming entry to protect this market power. But as an MVPD, TW -- like any other MVPD -- benefits from the creation of valuable new programming services that it can sell to its subscribers. On net, however, it appears true that TW's incentives balance in favor of wishing to prevent entry.

modification of TW's internal governance structure²² -- for TCI to have an incentive to deter entry by independent programmers. TCI's incentive to encourage programming entry is intensified, moreover, by the fact that it has undertaken an ambitious expansion program to digitize its system and increase capacity to 200 channels. Because this appears to be a costly process, and because not all cable customers can be expected to purchase digital service, the cost per buyer -- and thus the price -- of digital services will be fairly high. How can TCI expect to induce subscribers to buy this expensive service if, through programming foreclosure, it has restricted the quantity and quality of programming that would be available on this service tier?²³

The foregoing illustrates why foreclosure theories fell into intellectual disrepute: because of their inability to articulate how vertical integration harms competition and not merely competitors. The majority's analysis of the Program Service Agreement ("PSA") illustrates this perfectly. The PSA must be condemned, we are told, because a TCI channel slot occupied by a TW program is a channel slot that cannot be occupied by a rival programmer. As Bork noted, this is a tautology, not a theory of competitive harm.²⁴ It is a theory of harm to competitors -- competitors that cannot offer TCI inducements (such as low prices) sufficient to cause TCI to patronize them rather than TW.

All of the majority's vertical theories in this case ultimately can be shown to be theories of harm to competitors, not to competition. Thus, I have not been persuaded that the vertical aspects of this transaction are likely to diminish competition substantially. Even were I to conclude otherwise, however, I could not support the ²² TW has a "poison pill" provision that would make it costly for TCI to increase its ownership of TW above 18 percent.

²³ Note too that there is an inverse relationship between TCI's ability to prevent programming entry and its incentives to do so. Much of the analysis in this case has emphasized that TCI's size (27 percent of cable households) gives it considerable ability to determine which programs succeed and which fail, and the logic of the complaint is that TCI will exercise this ability so as to protect TW's market power in program sales to non-TW/non-TCI MVPDs. But although increases in TCI's size may increase its ability to preclude entry into programming, at the same time such increases reduce TCI's incentives to do so. The reasoning is simple: as the size of the non-TW/non-TCI cable market shrinks, the supracompetitive profits obtained from sales of programming to this sector also shrink. Simultaneously, the harm from TCI (as a MVPD) from precluding the entry of new programmers increases with TCI's subscriber share. (In the limit -- i.e., if TCI and TW controlled all cable households -- there would be no non-TW/non-TCI MVPDs, no sales of programming to such MVPDs, and thus no profits to be obtained from such sales.) Any future increases in TCI's subscriber share would, other things held constant, reduce its incentives to "foreclose" entry by independent programmers.

extraordinarily regulatory remedy contained in the order, two of whose provisions merit special attention: (1) the requirement that TW sell programming to MVPDs seeking to compete with TW cable systems at a price determined by a formula contained in the order; and (2) the requirement that TW carry at least one "Independent Advertising-Supported News and Information National Video Programming Service."

Under paragraph VI of the order, TW must sell Turner programming to potential entrants into TW cable markets at prices determined by a "most favored nation" clause that gives the entrant the same price -- or, more precisely, the same "carriage terms" -- that TW charges the three largest MVPDs currently carrying this programming. As is well known, most favored nation clauses have the capacity to cause all prices to rise rather than to fall.²⁵ But even putting this possibility aside, this provision of the order converts the Commission into a de facto price regulator -- a task, as I have noted on several previous occasions, to which we are ill-suited.²⁶ During the investigation third parties repeatedly informed me of the difficulty that the Federal Communications Commission has encountered in attempting to enforce its nondiscrimination regulations. The FTC's regulatory burden would be lighter only because, perversely, our pricing formula would disallow any of the efficiency-based rationales for differential pricing recognized by the Congress and the FCC.²⁷

Most objectionable is paragraph IX of the order, the "must carry" provision that compels TW to carry an additional 24-hour news service. I am baffled how the Commission has divined that consumers would prefer that a channel of supposedly scarce cable capacity be used for a second news service, instead of for something else.²⁸ More generally, although remedies in horizontal merger cases sometimes involve the creation of a new competitor to replace the competition eliminated by the transaction, no competitor has been lost in the present case. Indeed, substantial entry already has occurred in this segment of the programming market (e.g., Fox and MSNBC), notwithstanding the severe "difficulty" of entering the markets alleged in the complaint.²⁹ Obviously, the incentives to buy programming from an independent vendor are diminished (all else held constant) when a distributor integrates vertically into programming. This is true whether the integration is procompetitive or anticompetitive on net, and whether the integration occurs via merger or via de novo entry.³⁰ I could no more support a must-carry provision for TW as a result of its acquisition of CNN than I could endorse a similar requirement to remedy the "anticompetitive consequences" of de novo integration by TW into the news business.

²⁵ See, e.g., RxCare of Tennessee, Inc., et al., Docket No. C-3664, 5 Trade Reg. Rep. (CCH) ¶ 23,957 (June 10, 1996); see also Cooper and Fries, "The most-favored-nation pricing policy and negotiated prices," 9 Int'l J. Ind. Org. 209 (1991). The logic is straightforward: if by cutting price to another (noncompeting) MVPD TW is compelled also to cut price to downstream competitors, the incentive to make this price cut is diminished. Although this effect might be small in the early years of the order (when the gains to TW from cutting price to a large, independent MVPD might swamp the losses from cutting price to its downstream competitors), its magnitude will grow over the order's 10-year duration, as TW cable systems confront greater competition.

²⁶ See my dissenting statements in Silicon Graphics and Waterous/Hale, supra n.13.

²⁸ The order (§ IX(A)) requires that TW execute a program service agreement with at least one "Independent Advertising-Supported News and Information National Video Programming Service," which in turn is defined (§ I(Q)) as a service that offers "24-hour per day service consisting of current national, international, sports, financial and weather news and/or information . . ." This definition is inherently arbitrary: why does the service have to be "advertising-supported," and why does it have to offer "weather news"? Moreover, the provision has the effect (perhaps intentional) of excluding program services such as C-SPAN and C-SPAN2 -- programming services that are devoted entirely to covering "national and international news" but are not advertising-supported and do not tell their viewers whether it is going to rain tomorrow.

³⁰ The premise inherent in this provision of the order is that TW can "foreclose" independent programming entry independently (i.e., without the cooperation of TCI, whose incentives to sponsor independent programming are ostensibly preserved by the stock ownership cap contained in paragraphs II and III of the order). Given that TW has only 17 percent of total cable subscribership, I find this proposition fanciful.

Docket C-3710. Complaint, Feb. 6, 1997--Decision, Feb. 6, 1997

This consent order prohibits, among other things, a Michigan-based automobile manufacturer from misrepresenting the total amount due at lease inception, requires the manufacturer to provide consumers with clear, readable, and understandable cost information in their car lease and financed purchase advertising, requires advertisements, that reference an initial payment or state that no initial payment is due, to clearly and conspicuously disclose, as applicable, that the deal is a lease, and to disclose the fact that an extra charge may be imposed at the end of the lease based on the residual value of the car. The consent order also prohibits the respondent from misrepresenting the existence or amount of any balloon payment or the annual percentage rate for advertised loans.
